The Museum

Goliath

A man with glasses and a mustache, wearing a grey polo shirt and dark trousers, stands in a room with green and blue patterned walls. He is holding two large wooden replicas of swords. The sword on the left is a long, straight blade with a simple wooden hilt. The sword on the right is a much larger, broadsword-style blade with a wide, flat top and a pointed tip, also with a simple wooden hilt. To the right of the man, a long wooden pole with a rope looped around it is visible. In the background, there is a window with vertical blinds and a small table covered with a grey cloth.

Replica of a sword found in a giant's grave in St. Bees,
England in 1601.
The man was 19.5
feet tall.

Comparing it to Goliath's sword.
