

Books on the Ark

In his day, [600 BC] Ashurbanipal became one of the world's greatest patrons of literature. He sent scribes to Ashur, Babylon, Cuthah, Nippur, Akkad, Erech and other centers where they collected and copied clay books of history, grammar, geography, literature, law, medicine, astrology, prayers, poems, & hymns... When he had completed his library, it contained over 100,000 copies.

“I Ashur-bani-pal, within the palace, learned the wisdom of Nebo, the entire art of writing on clay tablets of every kind. I made myself master of the various kinds of writing. I read the beautiful clay tablets from Sumer and the Akkadian writing, which is hard to master. I had the joy of reading inscriptions on stone from the time before the flood.”

Conclusion:

Archeological evidence found in several ancient libraries shows:

- 1 That ancient peoples always had a written language.
- 2 Ancient people kept extensive records and world histories just as we do today.
- 3 The history of the Flood is found in the libraries of Ebla, Syria, dating back to 2000 plus BC. and Nineveh, in Babylon, dating to 600 BC.
