God has made the fact that He is our creator obvious through the written inspiration of the Bible, observation, logic, and understanding the most basic laws of science. Yet an increasing proportion of our population seem completely blind to this evidence. How did we get to this point and what do we do about the increasing blindness. This presentation explores one poignant example from each of the three major branches of science (cosmology, biology, geology) which reveals how obvious God has made the truth; then explores the three major reasons why academia, and the population at large, has become increasingly blinded to the truth.
